YALE GIVES VIRGINIA WORST DRUBBING EVER

Gannon, invincible at Norfolk, is Easy Prey on New Haven Grounds.

GILL PITCHES STEADY BALL
Count Now Stands Two and One in Favor of Orange and Blue's Sturdy Warriors.

New Haven, Conn., May 2.—Yale defeated the University of Virginia 17 to 4 here in the third game between the two teams this season. Virginia won the first two at Norfolk during Yale's spring Southern trip. Gannon, who held Yale almost hitless in the first Norfolk game, was batted from the box in three innings after Yale had touched him up for ten hits. Galloway and Neff, who followed Gannon, fared little better. Gile pitched steady ball for Yale, and cleared the bases with a home run in the fourth. Score:

HAMPDEN-SIDNEY WALLPERS SPIDERS

Count twice before they were retired. After that they never even threatened to score again. The Spiders looked dangerous several times, but failure to come through with the necessary bingles, coupled with tight and lucky fielding of the locals, held them without a tally throughout the game.

The loss of this game practically eliminates the Spiders from the championship race, while at the same time it puts Hampden-Sidney up somewhere nearer the leaders, so that she now has a good chance to get in the running for final honors. The Spiders are at the bottom of the league with a percentage of .250. If they win the two remaining games on their schedule they will finish with an average of .500. The Hampden-Sidney team by the result of this game took a boost from .333 to .500. They now have one more game with William and Mary and one more game with Randolph-Macon, so that by winning these two games they may be able to win the race, or, at least, tie up the race.

The playing of the two teams was very fast and full of life, each side seeming to realize that the slightest mischance would mean the loss of the game. However, the best performance on the field was by the Spiders' hurler, Duval. In the whole game he let down the batter with a series of infield scratch variety and the other one, though it traveled to center, was good for only one base. He issued only one free pass and sent six men back to the bench without even a smell of the pill. And he pitched extremely heady ball, using his brain all the time. From a spectators' point of view, it was a pity that the game was so short, because of the inability of his teammates to effect any scores. With any sort of batting support, Duval's pitching would have won in a walk.

Two Errors Costly.

The game was really lost by two errors. In the first inning, the Spiders' catcher, the extremely poor work of Left Fielder, who in his first at-bat, threw the ball at Saunders. With any kind of a throw he should have caught the Hampden-Sidney runner at the plate. The error was a poor, scarcely rolling to the plate. To the credit of Duval and his teammates, he said that the unfortunate play was not their consequence. The result, did not take them when they were in the game. They were in there fighting, and they fought all the harder after this. With a lot of life in their play, they were dangerous to the very last man in the last inning.

The only long hit of the game was registered by John Davis, the Spider receiver, when in the second inning, with two down, he whaled out a terrific drive left center that landed him safely on third base. A moderately fast man would have easily made a home run out of the box.

Moore, the Presbyterian pitcher, deserves all the praise that he will probably get. His work was very good. But he was also very ably supported by his team, at bat, and in the field. Many times some Spider would slam out a hard drive that looked good for a hit, but fast work on the part of the Hampden-Sidney infield would rob him of it and retire him at first. Besides his work against the batter, Moore was very effective in catching men off first and second, although in every case the base-runner was guilty of very headhunted work. In the third inning Robins was caught flat-footed off first, and Ancarrow was caught off second.

led in smiling Greece but has his daily quota of athletics along with his A. T. Co. and as he grows older the games become more strenuous. Should he win, the Greek says that he will carry his challenge direct to Zhyzsko. It should be a dashing and hair-raising match from start to finish. Unquestionably it is the biggest and best card yet offered Richmond fans. Likewise the men are admirably matched, and it is doubtful if two men could be got together who would be more likely to get up a whirlwind fight. It is likewise doubtful if more interest has ever been manifested in a match than in this.

As a matter of fact, it was upon the collection of hundreds of fans that Kervaras be matched with some real heavyweight that the promoters agreed to bring Donnelly here. Seats are selling rapidly.

RYAN'S YOUNG MEN UPHOLD STATUS QUO

man in the Virginia League that man by Dave Bunting. Dave Newton will cut up in shortfield and George Rohe at second, with the short throw to first, and his ability to cover the bag in line of need, will be saved needless exertion, and will cover himself with going a trifle hard, come July 4, when the sun blisters and the double-enders make the day seem all-powerful long. However, the glory that is ours here in the fact that the Colts are here all the blessed week, and perhaps it will be profitable. Roanoke, through in second place, got there through courtesy of Manager Joss Tannehill, of Mills, the forefront of the week and Jess Tannehill at the finish. Wonder if the former wonderful left-hander will remember the good old days, the good old days of Sprague's Hotel, at the corner of Third and Broad Streets; the good old days when he pitched a couple of ball games. Along the way, the outfield Tuesday, substituted in the infield Wednesday, pitched another game Thursday and back over the same routine. Gee, but them were days.

As to Jesse Tannehill. Probably the greatest pitcher ever turned out from the Virginia League; yes, greater even than Chesbro, or Leever, two of his fellow players, greater than all, save possibly Christy Mathewson, he has come back to his starting point to finish his baseball career. Those of us who knew him in the old days, who followed his fortunes during his long stay in the big show, will give him the warm hand, and, though it be the faintest, we shall not let him go. If he manages to win a game while he is here, he was a brave man to take the Portsmouth club when he did, for he had nothing to start with; yet, during his brief stay, he has built a very fair team, one that is bound to win ball games before the season closes. If he may manage to win a game, we believe that Jesse Tannehill will be up there at the finish.

The surprise of the week has been the slipping of Harry Mathewson's team. Starting the week secure in second place, they finish in fifth. Who put the stars under their one seems to know, but that they have skidded the percentage column shows. If, as Mathewson admits, and as we believe, he has the best club in the league, there is something radically wrong. Is that old story of dissenation within the ranks coming to the front again?

Gooners' Rapid Rise. After the Newport News surprise, the rise of the Gooners is next in importance. From fifth place to a tie for second is a fifty hit of speed, yet Helme Busch, demoted from the Richmond, is capable of almost anything. He is the most wonderful little fellow in the league. Always pulling something, always on the jump, he gets more out of his men probably because he drives himself hardest of all. He deserves all the success he gets, and still we hope that he loses every time he plays Richmond. If they don't dislike him for that, he dislikes him because of it, he can get a job right here.

Roanoke's rise has been fast and unlooked for. Intriguingly, Manager Mills has not a team that measures up to several in the league, but he has won ball games, and since the standard of success is the measure of accomplishment, he must have a pretty good team.

Season Young Yet. It's early yet, and before the teams are called upon to get within the player limit there will be many changes recorded. It will hardly be too critical. They are playing good ball; the race is close. With three teams tied for one place, and all within striking distance of the leaders, the fans have little kick coming. That the financial end is suffering under something of a strain can be charged to the schedule makers, not to the managers, all of whom have and are putting forth their very best efforts to win a pennant for their several cities.
